

Tax Exam Success makes the difference

Antony Signorini, Certified Chartered Accountant at the Cambridge office of Andrew Webster Limited is now eligible to be a Chartered Tax Advisor, having passed the Exam held by the Chartered Institute of Taxation – a feat accomplished by a mere 37% of those who registered to sit for the qualification.

Having worked for one of the “Big 4” accounting firms for 7 years, Antony, or “Tony” as he is known around the office and by his clients, comes from an Italian background with interests in paintballing, scuba diving, drinking real ale and a self confessed love for cooking “Italian”.

According to Tony, “passing the tax exam will make a big difference as it means I can take on a greater variety of work including tax consultancy work and my clients benefit from my increased expertise and wider knowledge.”

Andrew Webster, Managing Director at the firm, states “we were extremely confident that Tony would pass the exams and have promoted him to a more senior position within the accounting department based on that confidence. He is an integral part of our organisation and will now be taking on a lot more work with our Tax Consultancy team”.
